Toddlers: Exploring their world

In a warm, responsive environment, with a maximum group size of fifteen, three teachers create a program that encourages the children to construct their own knowledge and practice their developing skills. The play-based curriculum respects individual differences while nurturing self-help skills, language acquisition and self-esteem.

Preschoolers: Learning by doing

With a ratio of one teacher to eight children, the curriculum expands beyond the child’s immediate experiences to capitalize on the child’s growing interest in the world. A rich variety of activities that encourage the child to be actively engaged in meaningful play enhance individual learning styles.

Kindergarten: Promoting positive feelings toward learning

Providing an all day junior and senior kindergarten program linked with an elementary school with the advantage of a seamless day and enhanced parent communication. By allowing for individual and small group activities that are meaningful and thought provoking, the children are motivated by their own desire to learn and well prepared for grade one.
